

La Oliva

The Municipality

The La Oliva municipality, in the north of the island of Fuerteventura, has a surface area of 2566.13 km.

It has an interior landscape where the volcanoes, multi-coloured earth and welcoming villages make up a setting of unique beauty.

Among the municipality's many attractions, the natural areas are a must to be visited. The Tindaya Mountain with important archaeological and geological values, Corralejo Natural Park with its spectacular field of dunes, the Isla de los Lobos Park with its wealth of flora and fauna and its dreamy spots, the Malpaís de la Arena Natural Monument and the Protected Landscape of Vallebrón.

Sun and Beaches

Along its coasts we find long beautiful beaches of white sand and clear water, landscapes formed from a wide range of colours: turquoises, whites, blacks, golden, oranges, ochres, greens...

The shallowness of its waters, the fascinating landscapes, the wide diversity of its underwater fauna, its safety and waves gives La Oliva the ideal conditions for swimmers to enjoy, and also for lovers of scuba diving, surfing, windsurfing and other water sports.

The range of possibilities to enjoy the sun and beach in La Oliva municipality is endless: from kilometre long beaches of white sand and turquoise water, up to small coves lost beneath the cliffs, passing through natural pools of clear sea. The Great Beaches of Corralejo, the pools of El Cotillo, the wild beaches of the north coast, or the hidden areas of Isla de los Lobos leave nobody indifferent.

Leisure and complementary offer

Scuba diving: Underwater fishing and scuba diving are some of the most attractive tourist alternatives in the municipality of La Oliva. The seabeds of its coast hold a lot of life, especially in the triangular area formed by Corralejo, Isla de Lobos and the dunes, with a depth of no more than 17 metres and an incredibly clear sea.

Water sports: The constant winds that blow in the northern municipality convert it into one of the favourite places for the lovers of sailing, surfing, windsurfing and kiteboarding, a reason why the municipality has become the regular home of the "surfers" that come from the most varied areas of the world. El Cotillo, Majanicho, Esquinzo, El Hierro, La Punta, El Burro, La Tiñosa, Punta Elena... are some of the places to partake in these sports at top level.

Other disciplines such as kayaking, stand-up paddle and sports fishing, find an ideal centre in the coasts of La Oliva.

Trekking and Mountain biking: Trekking and walks, mountain biking and cycling, are widely undertaken by the tourists that visit the Natural Parks of Corralejo and Lobos, Calderón Hondo, Malpaís de La Arena or Montaña Sagrada de Tindaya. A very natural way to discover the beauty that the interior hides.

Spa and Thalasso: There are many establishments that have added to the offer of wellness, and there are many opportunities for spa and health and beauty treatments, which meet all tastes and requirements in La Oliva.

Culture and traditions

The municipality is a place where traditions are very deeply rooted and this is reflected in the popular fiestas that take place during the year in the villages in the area, such as the festivals of Virgen de la Candelaria, Nuestra Señora del Buen Viaje or Nuestra Señora del Carmen.

Other traditions that are found in La Oliva are Canary Island fighting, crafts made from open work, pottery and palms and popular gastronomy, where there is always Majorero cheese, gofio, goat's meat and an endless variety of fish, belonging to a place with a tradition for fishing.

There are many cultural centres, amongst which we find Casa de los Coroneles, Grano la Cilla Museum, la Cueva del Llano, the Fortaleza del Tostón, Casa Mané and the Traditional Fishing Museum, which tell us of a past and way of living in olden times.

Events and Congresses

The municipality of La Oliva is a centre for a wide range of different types of international sports, cultural or leisure events, amongst which we must highlight the International Kite Festival, the Dunas de Corralejo Half Marathon, the Music festival on Fuerteventura beach, carnivals, the Fuerteventura Wave Classic for lovers of windsurf and waves and the Exponáutica de Corralejo, among others.

Two auditoriums and many hotels and establishments with halls that are equipped for congresses, make it possible for business tourism to perfectly combine work and pleasure in La Oliva.
